Issue 3 | March 2021 | BoDE Foundation

Message from the Chairman – Neil Bhaskar

“There are two broad categories of illness’ that prevail throughout the world, one is that affects the physiology, the other affects the psychology”.

It is very important for people to understand and act accordingly, during a time of crisis. Just like soothing words fail to lower the body temperature (in case of fever), gulping capsules often fail to lower the temperature rise of the mind.

Looking back to the year behind

Last year, the month of March was a cursed one round the globe. The rise in Covid-19 was at its peak, the news of death was the harbinger of fear among all sects of people. With time, the brave warriors fought hand in hand, the year came to an end, but has the fear ended?

Blog Post

The world yet appears to be in jeopardy, due to the 2nd wave in pandemic in late 2020 / early 2021. The year 2021 gifted the world with vaccines against Covid-19 and with it a ray of hope. More needs to be accomplished though.

‘Overall, the human race has endeavored to evolve and emerge stronger against all odds, and battled its way ahead’.

Monthly Communiqué / Periodical

The thought behind the theme

In the previous month's issue of our communiqué, we had discussed at length, the importance and the proper channelisation of 'breath' into our daily lives, in order to gift ourselves a healthier version of life.

Presently, the world is being juxtaposed between two aspects of the greatest pandemic ever. The first one being the antidote, the remedy, the vaccine to the prevailing effects of Covid-19, which is a major source of pleasure to most of the people. On the other hand, another reality hitting hard is the coming back of the virus once again, with full vigour.

Hence, it is very much important to look into the scenarios at hand, and to have a perspective on the effects it challenges humanity with.

How 'time' becomes key to business

Almost a year has been lost from the face of the earth. A year, whose span affected the business world a great deal. As of present, certain developmental strains are being observed in the entrepreneurial realm, in which time plays a vital role.

Time is the most valuable currency in life

'When times are tough, we often search for various paths to achieve easy success'.
